

TIPS FOR RAISING A FRIENDLY CAT

If there's one thing that all cat parents know, it would be that having a cat is like having a kid. Do you want your cat to grow up sociable and affectionate individuals? Here are some tips you need for raising a friendly cat.

1. Be Gentle.

Cats can become scared if you don't handle them with care, even when they've done something wrong. You want your cat to see you as this safe person.

3. Make canine friends.

Most cats are naturally afraid of dogs, they can get over their fear whenever they are in the presence of a calm and gentle dog.

5. Affection is the Solution.

Cuddle with her, carry her lovingly, and do all cat-and-parent stuffs with her.

7. Teach them Commands.

Teaching her tricks can through rewards can help build a closer relationship between you two.

9. Be a Guardian Angel.

Cats are naturally very curious so there are times when they will surely get in trouble. It's best to always keep an eye on them.

2. Train them to come when called.

Help be friendly towards them knowing that whenever someone calls his name, it's always someone whom he can trust.

4. Always Be Available.

Your presence is highly important when it comes to raising a friendly cat.

6. Reward and Socialize.

It's always a great thing to have your cats go outside the house once in a while. Go to a park where she can play with kids and socialize with human beings.

8. Call your cat Pet Names.

No, we're not talking about her name as your pet, but pet names like "honey," "love," "darling," and so on that expresses love and affection.

10. Make time for Playtime.

Sitting down with your cat and cuddling is one thing, but playing with them is another.
